Seattle performer earns bronze medal at International Jugglers' Association Championships

Fort Wayne, Indiana. — Seattle performer Cory Black earned third place at the 2026 International Jugglers' Association Championships, one of the world's premier stage juggling competitions and the championship competition of North America's largest annual juggling festival.

Black's award-winning act combines elite freestyle football with traditional toss juggling, a rare combination developed over more than 16 years of freestyle football practice and 11 years of juggling training.

The International Jugglers' Association Championships is an annual event that travels to a different North American city every year. The event attracts many of the world's top jugglers, who compete before a live audience each year. Black's performance placed him among the competition's top performers, earning him a bronze medal. This year, competitors traveled to Fort Wayne, Indiana from across the United States, Japan, Taiwan, and even further afield.

"I've spent years developing this act, so earning a medal at the IJA Championships was a really meaningful milestone for me," Black said. "It's incredibly rewarding to have this act recognized by the juggling community."

Based in Seattle, Black performs nationwide at corporate events, festivals, theaters, sporting events, and touring circus productions. He is available for interviews about competitive juggling, freestyle football, circus performance, and his journey to the IJA podium.
